

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A system for determining estimated navigation signal error information. Several error models are used by the evaluation unit, and, as a function of at least one defined selection standard, one of the several error models is selected. In determining the estimated navigation signal error information, the selected error model is applied to the received navigation signals, and the determined error information is transmitted to the radio navigation system and/or to user terminals.